Whatever the basis, in 1972 and 1973 nearly 80, 000 individuals entered treatment and rehabilitation in the ASAP projects (U. S. Department of Transportation 1975a, ch. 5). This amounted to about a third of all persons arrested and more than 80 of persons undergoing PSIs in those two years. Treatment and rehabilitation. In a 1971 review, Joscelyn, Maickel, and Goldenbaum (1971) categorized the treatment modalities for problem drinking as psychotherapy, indirect pharmacotherapy, direct pharmacotherapy, and combination therapy. A more recent review by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare discusses later developments in treating problem drinkers in general, including various group therapies, transactional analysis, for example, and motivational therapies (U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare 1974). Examples of treatment and rehabilitation programs aimed specifically at problem-drinking drivers are rare in the literature. Most of such programs follow an educational approach based on the archetypal Phoenix DWI course. Since its first formal session took place in 1966, the course has served as a prototype for over 400 programs in the U. S. and Canada (Malfetti and Simon 1974). Between 1966 and 1973, over 15, 000 people convicted of driving while intoxicated attended the course. The course consisted of four sessions at weekly intervals, each session lasting about two and a half hours. The methods of instruction included informally structured discussion, films, reading materials, and oral and written exercises requiring self-analysis. Each session was conducted by an instructor and attended by probation...
