Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Somewhere in France: A Patriotic in Two Acts In Somewhere in France the atmosphere is all important. Pierre and Madame Graudet are old and poor and discouraged. They have remained in the little home within sound of the German guns expecting daily to be compelled to flee. Their costumes should be old clothing but neat and clean. Nanon and Lisette also wear old clothing. Remember none of these people have been able to buy anything since the war began. Be careful not to overdress the parts. Jean wears the French uniform but as the French army in the trenches is not particular as to appearance of uniforms almost any blue or grey suit will do. Dr. Montaine should be dressed in blue suit with shoulder straps, brass buttons and gold stripe down trousers leg. In a production where absolute accuracy is necessary we would suggest consulting a professional costumer as to Jeans and Dr. Montaine s uniforms. Mary Dale wears white nurses dress with red cross on sleeve and cap. If a garden or lawn production is desired, build a wall out of brick paper which can be had for 10 cents per sheet, for a background with a gateway through the center. In either case, exterior or interior production, always remember that your characters are very poor and filled with dread and fear. As written the play is designed for the average amateur production upon a small stage or auditorium platform. If produced in a city theatre the jnilitary surroundings may be greatly augmented by introducing a squad of soldiers at the final climax. A band in the distance playing the Star Spangled Banner...
