Not illustrated. 1884 Excerpt: .under Baker will be recorded as the battle of Trinkitat. Then came the engagement at El Teb, in which a mixed army of about 4,000, assisted by our navy, bravely defeated about 6,000 Arabs, our people being under the command of General Graham; yet, of this well-fought battle we hear nothing, excepting that a few of the leaders have been promoted, which certainly seems somewhat strange. No more but this! Yet, I must not omit to mention that Graham s army again met the foe, on the 13th of March, at Tamai, and gained a complete victory over a much superior force; then, instead of our Government sending troops from India, or from England, to follow up these successes, General Graham returned to England, why, or wherefore, we have no explanation to this hour, June 10th, 1884. I do not like prognosticating evil, but I fear the worst, and all owing to the apathy at headquarters. Augustus Caesar would not have acted thus; and this gives me opportunity to state that at this Emperor s death, Jesus was just fourteen years of age, and Augustus had been in power thirty-one years when Jesus was born; so that his reign, in all, was fortyfive years. The name this Emperor was also known by was Octavius, and he was well beloved, especially for having driven Mark Antony out of Rome, who took refuge at Alexandria, where Cleopatra was, and both made away with themselves. Augustus took on himself...
