Excerpt: . . . resolutely into the yard; and knowing that respect is often paid in proportion as it is claimed, delivered his injunctions to the hostler with spirit, and entering the house, called vigorously about him. On the third day up rose the sun and Mr. Marvel. His troubles and his dangers were now such-as he wishes no other man ever to encounter. The ways were less frequented, and the country more thinly inhabited. He rode many a lonely hour through mire and water, and met not a single soul for two miles together with whom he could exchange a word. He cannot deny that, looking round upon the dreary region, and seeing nothing but bleak fields and naked trees, hills obscured by fogs, and flats covered with inundations, he did for some time suffer melancholy to prevail upon him, and wished himself again safe at home. One comfort he had, which was to consider that none of his friends were in the same distress, for whom, if they had been with him, he should have suffered more than for himself; he could not forbear sometimes to consider how happy the Idler is settled in an easier condition, who, surrounded like him with terrors, could have done nothing but lie down and die. Amidst these reflections he came to a town, and found a dinner which disposed him to more cheerful sentiments; but the joys of life are short, and its miseries are long; he mounted and...
